1. Policy Statement

In the event of a critical incident, Batool International Pty Ltd recognises that appropriate infrastructure must be in place to ensure the provision of all necessary support services. This document outlines the college policy, support mechanisms and procedures for managing a critical incident. This policy will ensure that Batool International Pty Ltd has:

- An effective approach in responding to critical incidents as they occur;
- Appropriate support and counselling services available to those affected;
- Appropriate training and information resources provided to staff.

2. Principles

Batool International Pty Ltd recognises the duty of care owed to its students and that planning for the management of a critical incident is essential.

3. Definition

3.1 A critical incident is defined by The National Code as 'a traumatic event, or the threat of such (within or outside Australia), which causes extreme stress, fear or injury'.

3.2 Critical incidents are not limited to, but could include:

- missing students;
 - severe verbal or psychological aggression;
 - death, serious injury or any threat of these;
 - natural disaster; and
 - issues such as domestic violence, sexual assault, drug or alcohol abuse.
- Non-life threatening events could still qualify as critical incidents.

4. Critical Incident

4.1 When a critical incident occurs or is identified, the CEO will call a meeting of the appropriate staff to form a Critical Incident group.

4.2 The Critical Incident Group is responsible for :

- assessing risks and response actions
- liaison with emergency and other services
- contact with students' relatives and other appropriate contacts
- liaison with other external bodies, such as home stays, carers or foreign embassies, and

 9. Organise a tasks timetable for the next hour/s, day/s etc.
 10. Plan ongoing feedback and regular meetings so that the team is continually in touch and working together.

Appendix A – Staff guide: how to

1. In the event of any critical incident, the first thing to do is calm the affected party/parties down and offer hope.

Communicate simply, take control and give clear and practical directions in order to reduce the anxiety and connect the logic of the affected party/parties.

2. You are not superhuman.

Managing a critical incident can be a very lonely time, especially if you are regarded as the focal link with international students at Batool International Pty Ltd. While you are busy providing care or support to those directly affected by the incident, your own health and emotional well-being may be at risk. Self-care should NOT be forgotten in your management strategy.

3. Take time out each day to telephone or e-mail another colleague

This will give you not only a chance to debrief, but also to compare notes with sympathetic colleagues who have had similar experiences and a real understanding of what you are feeling. you are helping others while you help yourself.

4. Update the resources as necessary

Insert as many local telephone numbers and contacts, and as much information as you can so that you can refer to the resources thereby allowing you to take effective and immediate action when necessary.

WHO ARE YOU?

As a college staff member, you are a person who interacts with International Students in a professional capacity.

You may be working in one or a range of the roles as listed below:

- Academic or Career Advisor
- Academic Staff
- Accommodation Officer
- Accountant
- Activities Co-coordinator
- Director
- Enrolments Officer
- First Aid Officer
- International Student Advisor
- Marketing Officer
- Operations Officer
- Receptionist
- Student Counselor.

You may be one of the first people notified in the event of a Critical Incident.

Ultimately, you need to be a concerned, caring, informed, capable, 'significant other' in the life of the international student. His or her own family structure will be unavailable, so assume that you will be helpful and a positive influence, in spite of your 'outsider' role. You, as an individual, will be more readily accepted than you as the Trainer or you as the Counselor, or You as the Accommodation Officer.

Optimise your own personal traits. Remember that it is more than likely that the international student has sought you out because of who you are, not what you are. So, follow your instincts and act accordingly.

Preparing yourself

How does one prepare for dealing with a critical incident in a cross-cultural setting?

The attitude you assume is of the utmost significance:

- Expect the unexpected. Not everything occurs between 9am and 5pm.
- Do not be easily upset or disturbed by even the most extreme situations.
- Convey empathy and respect for the emotions of those involved.
- Worry and fear should not be conveyed to the person.
- Provide a sense of stability and strength.
- Be able to alleviate tension and anxiety.
- LISTEN - to what is said.
- LISTEN - to what is not said.
- Create a personal equilibrium between your own values and those of a different value system, but keep the values of the client foremost in your mind.
- There will be times when you are unavailable. Don't be consumed by guilt. As long as policy and procedures are in place, there will be someone else who can step in and fulfill the required role.
- Network with ethnic groups in the local community. Keep a list of useful contacts that may be able to assist in matters not directly related to Batool International Pty Ltd: religious customs, family support, interpreters, and embassy or consulate contacts.
- It is not always important to remain within the specific religious affiliation to receive help in an emergency situation. Helping, coping, counseling skills are not religiously oriented...sensitivity is common to all members of the clergy. Keep this in mind when seeking assistance.
- Learn as much as you can from foreign nationals about how they would deal with specific scenarios - Ask questions:

"How should the body of a Muslim car accident victim be handled when the Coroner demands an autopsy and religious custom prohibits?"

"How does one act at a Chinese Buddhist funeral service? What is the proper way to express condolences?"

"How is mental illness regarded in your country?"

"What is the attitude toward rape in your country?"

The idea is to gain knowledge in advance, whenever possible.

Keep in contact with support networks like ISANA. Whether by telephone or e-mail, there will always be someone available to use as a sounding board.

Preparing Others

Staff may respond that they are not qualified to handle international students in crisis. Eradicate this 'us and them' attitude by engendering team-work among staff with regard to assisting international students. Let them know that they can be of invaluable assistance in a crisis by offering short-term training and workshops or sharing information at meetings.

Establish and maintain your own network of 'contacts'. Try to include as wide a variety of types and levels of staff as possible.

Keep in regular contact whether formally or informally, as these contacts will be your most reliable allies at a moment's notice.

Reinforce the Critical Incidents Policy for International Students and have the policy readily available online. It is important for staff to be aware of the existence of such a policy.

Task to review relevant community resources in your immediate local area: Funeral Directors, Police and Medical Authorities, Religious Leaders, Ethnic Group Leaders, Media Representatives, Insurance Representatives, local Embassy or Consular representatives.

Coordinate and conduct a Mock Exercise to simulate a Critical Incident is an option. Consider the need to have the exercise observed and assessed by an outside party if relevant.

Follow up with a debriefing and feedback session, inviting Counselors to educate participants about Stress Management, Post Traumatic Stress and general counseling principles when dealing with international students.

Reinforce general cross cultural awareness.

Appendix B – Sample of letter

The following are guide letters and require modification to the individual circumstances.

SAMPLE LETTERS

LETTER TO PARENTS

(Sample letter in the event of a tragedy)

Dear Parent,

Batool International Pty Ltd has been advised of (the sudden death, accidental injury) of one of our students. We are deeply saddened by the death/events.

(Brief details of the incident, and in the event of a death, perhaps some positive remembrances of the person lost)

We have support structures in place to help your child cope with this tragedy. (Elaborate)

It is possible that your child may have some feelings that he/she may like to discuss with you.

You can help your child by taking time to listen and encouraging them to express their feelings.

If you would like advice or assistance you may contact the following people at the school:

Student Services
First Aid Officer

Yours sincerely,

Appendix C – Media Hints

Generally, police or the Coroner makes media statements. In the event of death, there are legal restrictions and refer the matters to the police regarding the situation causing death.

In many cases, the institution would prefer not to issue a press release upon the death of an international student. However, in anticipation of some requests for comment from the media, it is advisable to have a press release drafted by Media staff just in case.

Listed below are some helpful hints, which can be used and applied within the role of the Coordinating Team:

1. “No Comment” = Not a good idea.
2. A good press release should answer the following questions:

What?	How?	When?	Where?	Why?
3. Add a joint statement from the CEO and/or from staff representatives with a student support focus) which will signify unity and dissuade the press from looking for an ‘alternative angle’ on the story. The statement may include an expression of surprise and sadness at the tragedy, as well as compassion for the family of the victim.
4. A very brief comment should be included explaining college policy on responding to this kind of situation. In addition, if the situation warrants, it may be appropriate to comment on what measures may be considered to ensure that any future events of this nature are avoided. In most cases a statement that Batool International Pty Ltd is supporting police and authorities may be the most appropriate.
5. A telephone contact for further information is always left at the bottom of a press release only if the media are able to contact Batool International Pty Ltd. The Coordinating Team should determine who will be responsible for media inquiries, and all staff should be alerted to the procedure for directing media inquiries to this person.

Sample media release

A sponsored male student from Botswana, 31, has died at,, in metropolitan Sydney.

The CEO,, said the incident had saddened Batool International Pty Ltd staff, its student body, and the international student community.

“We are all dispirited at the loss of a very promising young man. Our profound condolences go to his family”, said.

A memorial staged at Batool International Pty Ltd yesterday was attended by more than people, including trainers, International Student Support staff, family, friends, and classmates.

NOTE: The release is short and to the point. It depicts Batool International Pty Ltd as a caring institution, a position reinforced by the fact that the memorial service was held on college’s own grounds.

Note that the above release was issued after the memorial service, to avoid the likelihood of media coverage at the service itself. The cause of death has been revealed (if police allow or is known), because of the young age of the deceased.

Should media investigate further, it is suggested that the CEO respond with a statement saying simply, "We are sure you will understand that we are not able to discuss any of the personal issues which may have been associated with this young man's death. It has always been our policy to respect the privacy of our students and their families."

Managing the media

Each critical incident is unique and the dynamics of each situation will have to be assessed when it occurs. It is important that a structured approach to media management is developed and is included in the management plan to ensure the most positive and supportive response from the media.

Take the media calls

The CEO or nominated person should handle the initial media calls. Be sure to return media calls as soon as possible unless it is determined inappropriate.

It may be important that the college has an input in media coverage so that the story is balanced. Therefore avoid answering questions with "no comment". Respond to questions accurately, however it may be necessary to explain to the media that you are unable to answer their questions at this time because of the sensitive nature of the issue; or you do not have the information available. It may be necessary to check with the police, ambulance or fire brigade etc, before making a statement. It is critical that wrong information is never provided to media. Keep answers brief and do not be drawn into their assumptions or intimidated to answer. Remember, the media are very well trained in coercing responses or suggestions.

Response time is important

Key staff likely to be contacted by the media need to be alerted immediately and kept informed as more details come to light. Inform reception as soon as possible that the incident has occurred, even if the details are unclear and remind reception not to release any information. Media liaison officers if appointed will need to be informed of the incident. They will be able to assist by handling media inquiries. The media liaison officer will liaise with the Director regarding the situation. Police and authorities have media liaison officers who may be of use to contact. In

Channel all media inquiries through one person

The CEO will liaise directly with the media as more details are known.

Relate to journalists in a positive and friendly way

Enlist the support of the media to report accurate information and avoid being defensive. Journalists are professionals too. They have been assigned the job of reporting the story. They feel the public have a right to know and they will report the story with or without CI co-operation. In a major disaster, the media is an essential means of communicating information, e.g. providing hot-line phone numbers, etc.

Working with the media representatives as professionals and providing them with accurate information about the incident means staying in control. Cooperation can make the difference between inaccurate reporting resulting in a story that reflects negatively on Batool International Pty Ltd or its associates. Show our caring role and our ability to respond effectively in a crisis.

Emphasis should be placed- in media comment- on the support available to students and staff.

Determine what the official response will be

The team approach may be able to provide advice to staff about other developments or broader issues that may need to be considered when framing the response. Police or authorities media liaison officers may also be able to offer advice about the most effective methods of responding to newspaper, radio and television interviews.

EXPRESS CONCERN. RESTRICT ANSWERS TO FACTS. ACCENTUATE THE POSITIVE.

It is appropriate, for example, to:

State the facts about what has occurred when known and what is being done.

For example: when and where it occurred, how many people were involved or hurt, how much damage has been done, etc.

Describe the assistance being provided for students and staff that may have been traumatized.

Explain that all at college has been deeply shocked, that all available resources and support services have been gathered and what steps are being taken to rectify the situation and get things back to normal as soon as possible.

It is imperative to avoid making comments, which imply blame or fault for any part of the incident, as there could be significant legal implications.

Official inquiries – eg. by the police - are likely to follow serious incidents. Media comments on the public record may have a bearing on proceedings at such inquiries.

Appendix D – Police involvement

While critical incidents are not only cases of sudden unexpected death, the police and others must be contacted.

The police are required to investigate all cases of sudden unexpected death. Police actions include:

- Reporting such death to the Coroner
- Notifying next of kin
- Obtaining official identification of the deceased (this must be done by someone who has known the deceased for some time)
- Conducting investigations on behalf of the Coroner - for example, interviewing witnesses and others who may have been involved, collecting clothing and other items for use in evidence, delivering specimens for analysis.

Coronial Investigations

Every death reported to the Coroner must be investigated. The body of the deceased will be taken to the morgue where it may be viewed by the relatives but not touched. Once the coronial inquiries are complete (and this may take some time), the body will be released to funeral directors to await instruction from the next of kin. At this stage the body may be touched.

Post Mortems (autopsies)

Many reported deaths require a post mortem examination to determine the medical cause of death. This usually involves an internal and external examination of the body, and of tissue, organ and blood specimens taken from the body. Cultural and religious objections to a post mortem may be discussed with the coroner or a court social worker. However, these objections very rarely influence the coroner's decision to conduct an autopsy. Do not comment on autopsy issues

Inquests

An inquest is a public hearing before a coroner (and occasionally a jury) to decide the circumstances of death. Once initial investigations are completed, the Coroner may (as in 90% of cases) dispense with an inquest. However, the Coroner may order an inquest or, in certain circumstances (such as murder), an inquest may be legally required.

Appendix E – Preparing for funeral

Where there is no next of kin or family or significant friends to claim for burial, police can arrange a state funeral which is paid for by the State.

The following information is taken from materials published by the Australian Funeral Directors Association. A variety of reading material is available. Inquiries may be directed to the National Head Office of:

Arranging a funeral

When faced with having to make funeral arrangements, most people have no prior experience in organising such an event, and little idea of what to do. Initial interviews with the funeral director can be at a location nominated by you. While some people may have a fairly clear knowledge of the arrangements they want to make, others may want to consider a myriad of alternatives before making any decisions. The funeral director is there to guide and advise on the many matters which need to be considered.

Decisions to make will include:

- Time and location of the funeral
- Type of service
- Burial/cremation (reflection of the religious or ethnic attitudes and family traditions)
- Type of coffin
- Viewing arrangements
- Choice of participants
- Floral arrangements, motor vehicles and other relevant matters.

The funeral director

The funeral director will take responsibility for arranging, with the family concerned, the time and place for an appropriate funeral service by coordinating and liaising with clergy members, doctors, hospitals and cemetery or crematorium officials.

The funeral director will lodge notices in the press, arrange floral tributes, provide a hearse and other vehicles, a funeral chapel and any other facilities and personnel required to carry out the wishes of the family being served.

All official forms must be completed and taken to the appropriate people at the right time. The funeral director, for example, registers the death with the Registrar of Births, Deaths and Marriages.

The funeral director ensures that human dignity both of the deceased and the survivors is preserved, and performs tasks in a sensitive and understanding manner.

Kindness, helpfulness, understanding and the empathetic handling of funeral arrangements are the vital psychological components of the funeral director's role.

When someone dies

When death occurs, the first practical consideration in most cases will be the need for a doctor's attendance. In Australia today, relatively few people die at home and in most cases the medical necessities and formalities will be taken care of by the relevant hospital or other authorities.

The deceased's doctor or the hospital authorities will explain what steps, if any, are required to establish the cause of death and complete the necessary death certificate. Meanwhile, the family may begin making their desired funeral arrangements, which can be completed when the death certificate has been signed.

The funeral ceremony

All reputable funeral directors are able to provide a broad range of services to suit the precise requirements of the bereaved family.

Funerals can be as different as the people they are for, with their main purpose being to help the bereaved in the first stages of grief.

The order, style and content of service can all be varied to suit the family's needs. A personal tribute from a family member or close friend, or perhaps including appropriate cultural traditions, may make the service more meaningful.

Special circumstances

Deaths from Suicide and AIDS may sometimes present special problems because of old religious discrimination and/or social stigma. Nevertheless, the need for people to mourn and the rituals of the funeral are still essential for friends and family.

When there is no body (eg: drowning accidents, abduction) it is still important to acknowledge the life of the deceased and help the family and friends to accept that death has occurred. A special memorial service to allow everyone to say goodbye and be able to get on with their grieving is essential. The use of photos, significant objects associated with the deceased's life, and perhaps candles are a great help to use in place of the body.

Grieving

Grief is not a single response, but a complicated series of feelings, emotions and even physical manifestations of a person's reaction to the bereavement.

Grieving is an intensely personal process. Each death is unique and everyone affected will respond differently. Most survivors however, will pass through similar stages of grief from initial shock, numbness, and often denial and anger to realisation, acceptance and finally re-adjustment.

The intensity of grief experienced will be affected by a number of factors, including the degree of attachment to the deceased and the duration and quality of relationship with them. The greater the attachment, the longer it is likely to take to resolve grief.

However it is not the passage of time itself which brings resolution, but the working through of stages of grief. A meaningful funeral service can play a significant part in the crucial early stages of grieving.

Appendix F – Additional information

CRITICAL INCIDENT MANAGEMENT PLAN

A critical incident is defined as anything that is both extraordinary and beyond our normal ability to cope. Examples of critical incidents would include the death of a student, an accident on camp, illness/death of a staff member and similar events that impact on groups within the Centre or the whole Centre. Naturally, the specific situation will determine the actions a Centre will take. These actions will vary according to the degree to which the incident is public, the age of those affected by it and the extent of their involvement.

General Guidelines

1. Plan the response

The Principal Administrator should take responsibility for organising and coordinating the Centre's response. This will involve calling together the Principal Administrator and Centre Counselor. It may also be the Principal Administrator's role to contact emergency services and/or families of those affected.

2. Provide information to those affected by the incident

The psychological beginning point in assuming some control over an event is understanding what happened. It is the Principal Administrator's task to provide information and facilitate appropriate venues for its dissemination. Students and teachers have a need to accept the reality of the event, and the inevitable discussions that follow are better based on fact rather than on rumour or supposition. It is important that rumours are discounted.

3. Resume normal routines as soon as possible

There is reassurance and safety in the predictability of normal routines. Once the event has been formally acknowledged - perhaps through meetings, a memorial service, or whatever is appropriate - the next step may well be to resume, as far as practicable, normal timetables, so that any ongoing recovery strategies can take place against a background of predictability.

4. Assess the psychological/emotional needs of those affected.

After a traumatic event, the people involved will need support. The nature of this support will vary amongst individuals but generally those closest to the incident will need more assistance than others. On advice from staff, the Counselor should determine the nature and degree of support needed. At a minimum level, this should mean providing opportunities for those involved to express and share with others the reactions that they had to the incident. Those in charge and those providing support also need extra consideration during this time. Finally, some action of "closure" may need to be planned.

Some practical ideas for facing classes

When something distressing has happened at a Centre or within a Centre community there is usually at least one class that is particularly affected and in need of support.

Practical ideas to use with all age groups

1. Let the students tell you what happened.
2. Discuss what actually happened: give facts and sort rumour from fact.
3. Allow discussion time:

- Where were you when it happened?
- How did you find out?
- What did you feel?
- How might others feel?

The notion of blame is difficult. Instead try to incorporate what can be done now, into the discussion.

4. Some students like to write or draw - to recall events, people, and emotions - or to vent them.
5. Talk to the class about how they will respond and support survivors/victims during their absence (letters, visits etc.) and when they return to the Centre.

Practical ideas for use with adolescents

1. Group discussions are important and useful. They allow time to express and normalise their reactions and it is helpful if teachers and adolescents share their reactions. "Crazy" thoughts, extreme emotions such as helplessness, frustration, anger and survivor guilt may need to be recognised and vented.
2. It is important and useful to end discussions on a positive and practical note as follows:
 - What heroic acts were observed?
 - What can we do right now - contribute to a memorial service, practical support for victims and families?
 - What can we do in longer term? Discuss possible improvements to the way the situation was managed – what could we do better?
3. Plan a follow-up time. Offer referral for individual counselling. Let students know what sort of help is available and that it is okay to seek help. Peer support can be valuable if peers are emotionally able to handle it.
4. If moved to tears, don't be afraid to let students/adults see - it can be very supportive and empathic.

People who may be affected by critical incidents

When a critical incident affects a Centre community, those in that community will play various roles and encounter different experiences. The following model classifies the various groups of people who may be affected by the incident. This is a useful guide for identifying those who are likely to need assistance.

For Staff: Coping with your own reactions to a critical incident/event.

One of the difficulties from a staff member's perspective may be one's own reactions to a shared critical incident. The way a person reacts may make it harder for him/her to respond to the reactions of students. Equally, sometimes a staff member's reaction may facilitate better understanding of a child's behaviour.

Individuals have a wide range of responses to critical incidents and may be surprised by their own reactions or those of others. An individual's memories or experiences, and/or the accumulation of critical incidents, may increase the likelihood of a particular incident triggering a personal crisis. Effects of critical events may include:

- Physical effects, such as changes in appetite and/or libido, sleep disturbances, increased susceptibility to illness, breathlessness, dry mouth, tremor and fatigue and increased sensitivity to noise, light and smell.
- A range of emotional responses which may include anger, irritation, sadness, hostility, aggression, feeling inadequate, and denial.
- Altered thought patterns such as confusion, disorientation, forgetfulness, difficulty with tasks and normal routines, flashbacks, nightmares, poor judgment, and inability to assess others and oneself realistically.

The longer-term effects may include burnout or exhaustion, lack of interest in work or life in general, withdrawal from family and friends, escapism and over work. These responses impact upon family, social and work relationships and activities. It is important that teachers pay attention to their own mental and physical well-being and take time to ensure that they look after themselves, as well as their students, when a critical incident occurs.

OTHER RESOURCES AVAILABLE FOR REFERENCE

A critical incident policy must include contact information for the police and any other organisations that may be able to assist in such a situation, for example community/multi-cultural organisations or phone-counselling services.

There are a number of Critical Incident policies and procedures available for universities and schools.

For example, ISANA has developed a critical incident kit, which is available at:

<http://www.isana.org.au> and search critical incident in the internal search box

The Independent Schools Council of Australia (ISCA) has developed a Critical Incident policy as part of their Transition Support Handbook which is available at: <http://www.isca.edu.au/> (pp133-142 at time of policy update).
